

Developing Culturally and Linguistically Responsive, Response to Intervention (RtI) Systems for English Language Learners (ELLs) May 5 and September 8, 2010

Part 1 - May 5, 2010 This workshop will provide guidance to those interested in implementing RtI with ELLs through:

- Understanding the seven integral factors that impact achievement for ELLs and the process for data collection and progress monitoring within these factors,
- Introducing a collaborative model of information gathering and service provision, describing before diagnosing, and delivering a continuum of services,
- Determining specific and systemic interventions (Tier 1, 2, 3 and 4) for all seven integral factors that impact achievement for ELLs, and
- Next steps will be detailed to implement via action plans after the workshop concludes and before the group reconvenes in September for Part II of the workshop series.

Part 2 - September 8, 2010 This workshop is a continuation of the May 5, 2010 workshop and will provide additional guidance to those interested in implementing RtI with ELLs through-

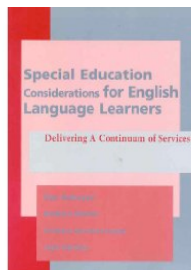

- Application to real world contexts of the seven integral factors that impact achievement for ELLs and the process for data collection and progress monitoring within these factors,
- Review and refinement of a collaborative model of information gathering and service provision, describing before diagnosing, and delivering a continuum of services, modified to local situations,
- Further development of banks of specific and systemic interventions (Tier 1, 2, 3 and 4) for all seven integral factors that impact achievement for ELLs,
- Action plans will be reviewed, discussed and refined in light of lessons learned.
